

Automatic cable threader for optical cables

Article Overview

Automatic cable threaders streamline the installation and production of optical cables, reducing labor, improving precision, and protecting delicate fibers.

Overview

Automatic cable threaders are specialized machines designed to pull and guide optical cables through conduits, ducts, or production lines efficiently. They are widely used in telecommunications, utility infrastructure, and fiber optic cable manufacturing. These machines minimize manual handling, reduce the risk of cable damage, and increase installation speed and consistency .

Types of Automatic Cable Threaders

- Electric Semi-Automatic Threaders
 - Equipped with electric motors to control cable pulling speed and tension.
 - Ideal for commercial installations, campus networks, and projects requiring precision.
 - Provide a balance between automation and operator control .
- Hydraulic Threading Machines
 - Use fluid pressure systems to deliver high torque and consistent pulling force.
 - Suitable for large-scale infrastructure projects and heavy-duty cable deployments.
 - Offer robust performance in challenging terrains or long-distance runs
