

Cable tray procurement in East Africa

Article Overview

Successful procurement of cable trays in East Africa requires selecting durable, corrosion-resistant materials, compliant suppliers, and reliable logistics to meet regional infrastructure and industrial needs.

Market Overview

The East African cable tray market is growing due to industrialization, expanding power grids, and infrastructure projects in countries like Kenya, Tanzania, and Uganda. Demand is driven by sectors such as mining, oil and gas, telecommunications, power generation, and commercial construction. Aluminium and galvanized steel are increasingly preferred for their lightweight, corrosion resistance, and ease of installation, while stainless steel (Grade 316) is recommended for coastal or high-salinity areas to prevent corrosion .

Material and Standards

- Common materials: Galvanized steel, stainless steel, and fiberglass .
- Corrosion protection: For coastal projects, use HDG with verified zinc thickness >80 microns or marine-grade epoxy coatings; stainless steel is ideal for severe environments .
- Compliance: Ensure suppliers meet IEC, ISO, CE, and local national standards. Documentation such as salt spray test results and batch traceability is critical to avoid counterfeit or substandard products .
