

Do the front-end display cases need to be secured

Overview

Shelving or display elements inside should be fitted to prevent collapse or movement if the case is knocked. Display case lighting should be housed in a separate light box compartment secured by different locks to the main display section. Valuable or culturally important objects in cultural venues are usually shown in display cases for physical protection as well as environmental reasons. High-security cases can also help delay theft and damage if physical security of the building cannot be strengthened, perhaps due to listing. Exploring the world of high-security display cases reveals a range of solutions designed to protect valuable items across various industries. This is where high security display cases come in, offering a robust and reliable solution for retailers who need to. Tecdur Display Secure is a secure display case glazing solution widely used for retail displays, jewellery cabinets, counters and other situations where valuable items need to be protected against 'smash and grab' threats. Glass on Top, Front, Back and Sides with Laminate Base and Melamine Kick. The clear casing allows you to maintain superior product visibility. Modern security is about seamlessly integrating protection into your store's aesthetic, so it enhances the shopping experience rather than detracting from it.
