

How much does a fiber optic cable marker cost

Article Overview

Fiber optic cable markers typically cost between $0.50 and $3 per marker, depending on type, size, and quantity purchased.

Fiber optic cable markers are available in various forms, including self-laminating tags, adhesive labels, snap-on markers, and hang tags. For example, a package of 20 self-laminating waterproof fiber optic cable tags measuring 3.5 x 2 inches can be purchased on Amazon, with prices generally ranging around $10–$20 per pack, which equates to approximately $0.50–$1 per marker. Commercial suppliers like XpressTags and PipeMarker.com offer markers that can be customized for cable identification, with prices varying based on material quality, size, and order volume. Bulk orders or industrial-grade markers may cost $1–$3 per marker, especially for durable outdoor or high-visibility types. Factors affecting cost include:

- Marker type: Laminated, adhesive, or snap-on
 - Durability: UV-resistant, waterproof, or chemical-resistant markers cost more
 - Quantity: Bulk purchases reduce per-unit cost
 - Customization: Pre-printed or custom text markers may increase price
- For large-scale projects, contacting suppliers directly for a quote is recommended, as prices can vary significantly depending on specifications and shipping requirements. In summary, for most standard applications, expect to pay $0.50–$3 per fiber optic cable marker, with bulk and industrial-grade markers at the higher end of the range.
