

Matching the Qatari atrium

Article Overview

Qatari atriums, such as those in the Museum of Islamic Art and Royale Palace, combine grandeur, cultural motifs, and modern functionality, offering inspiration for matching or complementing their design.

Museum of Islamic Art Atrium

The Museum of Islamic Art (MIA) in Doha features a 50-meter-high vaulted atrium that serves as the building's centerpiece, hidden from the exterior by a central tower . The atrium is crowned with a faceted dome that captures and reflects light through an ovule at the top, creating a dynamic interplay of molded light within the space . Its structural framework is made of stainless steel, and the ceiling is finished with individual molds, emphasizing geometric precision and modernist elegance. The atrium connects the main building to the educational wing via a central courtyard, blending functional circulation with aesthetic impact . The design reflects neo-vernacular Qatari architecture, integrating Islamic artistic principles with contemporary forms, and emphasizes natural light, symmetry, and monumental scale .

Royale Palace Atrium

The Royale Palace Atrium in Doha exemplifies contemporary classical design inspired by 18th-century French decor . Spanning 16 meters in height, it serves as the central hub connecting multiple floors. The atrium features decorative wall moldings, intricate ceiling carvings, and custom water-jet flooring patterns in premium Italian marble, including Bianco Vienna and Embrador varieties . GRG-coated walls, textur...
