

Price of Low-Temperature Resistant Fiber Optic Couplers for Lao IDC Data Centers

Article Overview

Low-temperature resistant fiber optic couplers typically range from $5 to $50 per unit depending on type, connector configuration, and performance specifications.

Overview

Fiber optic couplers are essential for splitting, combining, or distributing optical signals in data center networks, ensuring high-speed and low-loss transmission . For low-temperature environments, couplers are designed with materials and ceramic sleeves that maintain performance under extreme conditions, which is critical for IDC operations in regions with variable climates .

Types and Pricing

- Single-mode couplers (SMF): Used for long-distance, high-bandwidth applications. Prices typically range $10-$50 per unit depending on coupling ratio, connector type (LC, SC, MTP), and manufacturer .
- Multimode couplers (MMF): Suitable for short-range data center links. Prices are generally $5-$20 per unit .
- Hybrid or adapter couplers: Connect different fiber types or connector types (e.g., LC to SC). These specialized couplers may cost $15-$40 per unit due to additional engineering for low-temperature resistance .
- MPO/MTP couplers: Designed for high-density multi-fiber connections in data centers. Prices can range $30-$50 per unit depending on fiber count and environm...
